

MOTION ACTIVATED FIREARM LASER SIGHT

ABSTRACT

The present invention is directed to a system that controls the automatic operation a laser in a sighting mechanism to detect a target. The laser is activated when the system detects vibrational motion that causes a piezoelectric strip to produce an electrical signal. The laser is deactivated after a predetermined time has elapsed.